

WHAT NEVADA JUDGES SHOULD KNOW TO ADDRESS THE LINK BETWEEN INTERPERSONAL VIOLENCE AND ANIMAL ABUSE

BENCH TOOL^{i,ii}

Research has established a link between animal abuse and other forms of family violence, such as domestic violence, child abuse, and elder abuse.ⁱⁱⁱ Additionally, research has shown that perpetrators of violent acts against animals frequently have significant criminal records and pose a safety risk for the public.^{iv}

The existence of animal abuse is critical to consider when handling domestic violence, child abuse, and criminal and juvenile delinquency cases. Understanding the connection between humans – particularly children – and pets also enables the family court to better serve families in custody and property division cases.

DIVORCE AND PET WELL-BEING ISSUES

Just as with children, some parties in divorce cases use the bond between a human and a pet to manipulate or hurt the other person. A survey of matrimonial lawyers found that 27% of respondents saw an increase in pet custody disputes in the last five years.^v

Matters to Consider

- Where the pet lives pending the divorce
- If the parties' relationship will allow for joint custody of the pet
- The interaction of each party with the pet
- The fitness of each party to care for the pet
- The well-being of the pet
- Addressing pet maintenance, care, and custody in the court's order

CHILD CUSTODY AND PET WELL-BEING ISSUES

Family members, especially children, are emotionally attached to their pets. The pet-human bond provides mental and physical benefits. Children talk to pets despite knowing pets don't understand. Pets help children feel accepted and less lonely. Children rank their ties to pets above parent/friends as "most likely to last no matter what, even if you get mad at each other."^{vi}

Matters to Consider

- Which parent can provide a safe environment for the pet
- The parent's ability to care for the pet during timesharing
- How pet transportation will be handled with children during timesharing
- If the parties' relationship will allow transfer of the pet during timesharing
- The activities the child will be involved in during timesharing with the parent
- Allowing the child access to, or possession of, the pet if they have an emotional connection

COMMON SIGNS OF ANIMAL NEGLECT/ABUSE

|---|--|
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Failure to provide the animal with regular veterinary care or treat wounds or injuries • Failure to provide the animal with adequate food, water, or shelter from the elements • Extreme overcrowding with too many animals | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Infestation of the animal with fleas, ticks, or other insects • Lack of grooming, such as extreme matting of fur, overgrown nails or a dirty coat, of the animal • Unsanitary environment, including buildup of animal excrement |

MATTERS TO CONSIDER FOR ALL LINK-RELATED CASES

|--|---|
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Pets or companion animals present at the home • Bonds between family members and the pet • Individual who cares for the pet • Recent injuries to pet or companion animal • Family members concerned about the safety/well-being of the pet | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Children either witnessing or being involved in the abuse of a pet • If appropriate, ordering a trauma-informed mental health screening • Placing pets and humans in the safest environment by including pets and service animals in safety plans, protection orders, stay away/no contact orders, or visitation orders |

PROTECTION ORDERS AND LINK ISSUES

Animal abuse is higher in households where intimate partner violence occurs.^{vii} Perpetrators use the family member – pet bond to intimidate and/or control their victim,^{viii} to gain the victim's compliance, and to prevent the victim from leaving the relationship or seeking a protection order. Victims may delay, or refrain from, leaving the abuser due to concern for their pet.^x

Matters to Consider

- Perpetrator abuses or threatens to harm the pet
- Availability of options to keep the petitioner, children, and family pet safe
- Safeguarding pets by awarding temporary, exclusive care of the pet, and/or preventing transfer, concealment, encumbering, disposing of or harm to the pet

Judicial Authority

- Order the adverse party not to threaten, physically injure or harass any pets/animals kept by (the petitioner), the children, or the adverse party either directly or through someone acting on his/her behalf. See NRS 33.030(1)(e)
- Grant possession of the pets/animals to the (petitioner); prohibit the adverse party from taking the pets/animals either directly or through someone acting on his/her behalf. See NRS 33.030(2)(b)

CHILD ABUSE/NEGLECT AND LINK ISSUES

Abusers may harm or threaten to harm an animal to intimidate or control their children. Most animal cruelty incidents in the home occur while a child is present.^{xi} Observing this abuse is traumatic for a child.^{xii} Children may intervene to protect their pet from abuse which may lead to the child being injured.^{xiii}

Matters to Consider With the Child Welfare Worker/Guardian ad Litem (GAL)/Court Appointed Special Advocate (CASA)/Youth Attorney

- Children trying to protect their pet from abuse or neglect
- Notification by child welfare workers or mandated reporters of suspected animal abuse or neglect

Matters to Consider With Children^{xi}

- Child's concerns about the pet
- What the child wants the judge to know about the pet

Matters to Consider for Child and Pet Safety and Well-Being

- The child's attachment to the pet and whether the pet's welfare is an issue
- When there is a removal or placement of the child with foster care, allowing the child and pet to remain together
- If the foster home placement cannot take the pet, having someone the child trusts care for the pet or consider requesting animal foster care
- Collaboration between the GAL, CASA, and/or other parties to develop responses that maintain the child-pet bond to reduce trauma and promote the child's best interests, including a child-pet visitation plan^{xv}
- Ordering services and treatment to address the trauma to the child from witnessing animal abuse
- If appropriate, using the child-pet bond to promote reunification between the child(ren) and parents

ELDER ABUSE AND LINK ISSUES

Elders and adults with disabilities are vulnerable to abuse by caregivers.^{xvi} Adult protective service workers report that clients talk about pets being threatened, injured, killed, or denied care by caregivers.^{xvii} A caregiver may use the elder–pet bond as a means of control^{xviii} including for financial exploitation. Elders may delay, or refrain from, requesting services or medical attention for fear that their pet may be harmed, taken away, or be without care.

Matters to Consider

- Elder's reliance on a family member or caretaker that has harmed or threatened to harm a pet
- Elder's worry that if they need medical care something bad will happen to their pet
- Availability of options and resources to keep the elder and elder's pet cared for and safe
- Exploring and ordering, when possible, financial relief/support to assist the elder in meeting their needs as well as the needs of their pets

JUVENILE ANIMAL CRUELTY OFFENDING AND LINK ISSUES

Juvenile animal cruelty may indicate that the child has or is suffering from abuse or neglect.^{xix} A child may abuse an animal because they observed their parent or guardian do so.^{xx} Childhood animal cruelty may indicate a conduct disorder.^{xxi}

Matters to Consider

- The specific allegations of animal cruelty and the kind of harm alleged
- The youth's history of violence or displaced anger
- Youth's prior victimization history
- Requesting a criminogenic risk/needs assessment
- Screening for trauma
- Pending an adjudication, setting conditions for the safe release of the youth and for the safety of animals
- Evaluating plea agreements to ensure the adjudicated charge and facts reflect the seriousness of the offense and the actual harm committed against the animal
- Ordering a psychological screening and assessment from a clinician aware of the links between juvenile animal cruelty and other antisocial juvenile behavior
- Requesting trauma-informed treatment and other services
- Ordering a pre-disposition evaluation and report to address youth positive development, actions to remediate animal harm, and support to build youth empathy and resiliency
- Ordering probation conditions that ensure the youth receives humane education to develop compassion for animals
- Holding frequent review hearings to check the youth's progress with probation conditions and services
